HISTORY AND EVENTS

1893

The hotel was preceded by the former Royal Palace Hotel, a Victorian-era hotel completed in 1893 designed by British architect, Basil Champneys. As part of the war effort in the 1900s, The Royal Palace was taken over and used as the headquarters for the Woman's Royal Voluntary Service.

1961

In the 1961, as part of a Labour Government grant, the Queen Anne-style building was demolished and completely rebuilt in a Brutalist-style under the guide of architect, Colonel Richard Seifert. The hotel re-opened in 1965 as the Royal Garden Hotel, operated by the Oddeninos hotel company.

1966

Hosting the 1966 World Cup draw and the reception held to celebrate England's famous win also celebrating its 50th anniversary.

England supporters line the streets outside The Royal Garden Hotel in Kensington as they welcome their side's World Cup winners

1996

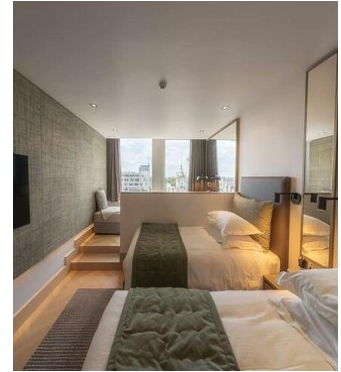

In 1994, the hotel was bought by the Singaporean entrepreneur, Tan Sri Khoo Teck Puat, and undertook a £30 million refurbishment. It reopened in April 1996 under the management of Khoo's Goodwood Group, joining the group's two Singapore hotels, the Goodwood Park Hotel and the York Hotel.

2011

In May 2011, the hotel completed the final stage of an extensive £45 million refurbishment

2020 - 2022

The hotel closed in 2020, and reopened in 2022 with a refurbishment of the rooms and the new restaurant, Origin Kensington
